When a site's development is credited 'in-house', you think two things: IT sector and 'uh-oh!' But this team sits in a company that provides hard-to-find and royalty-free images. And on this evidence, image libraries know more about website design than IT companies. This redesign focuses on usability, which means Web standards such as icons have been used to represent functions such as the shopping cart, light box and pricing calculators. It's a breeze to navigate and the stone colour palette is a perfect neutral tone. A bookmark for those in need of image libraries.
