

Alamy Sales Up Again . . .

*Stock Asylum Staff Report
Jan. 24, 2008*

If Alamy were a publicly traded company, its share price would probably be up today. That's usually what happens when a public firm beats its revenue estimates.

While some other stock photography companies have seen their business stagnate last year, Alamy reported its biggest year ever, with total revenues of $29.3 million.

The figure was $4.5 million above the $24.7 million Alamy reported in 2006 and $1.2 million more than the company's most recent prediction. Alamy had said it would make at least $28 million during 2007.

(Continued . . .)

SUBSCRIBE to the Stock Asylum to read the rest of this story. Or, if you already have a subscription, CLICK HERE and log in on the left side of the subscription/log-in page.

News articles and analysis from the Stock Asylum are now available by subscription only. For $35 a year, you get a professionally-produced trade publication that covers all aspects of the stock photography industry. Click on the "SUBSCRIBE" link above to start your subscription now.

FIRST CATALOG PAGE

CONTENTS

ABOUT THE PHOTOGRAPHERS

FIND A PHOTOGRAPHER

FIND AN AGENCY

HOME

© Paul Wiles

© Butch Martin